

The Four (Justifiable) Fears That Limit Value Creation

Ryan Gottfredson

Making
Progress

or

Creating Value

Making Progress

Creating Value

Making
Progress

Hinders agility and long-term growth

Creating
Value

Enables agility and long-term growth

Making
Progress

Creating
Value

Why do organizations commonly get sucked into focusing on “making progress” and how do we break free from its justifiable and enticing grip?

Making
Progress

Creating Value

The Ropes:
Four (Justifiable)
Fears That Limit
Value Creation

The Fear of Looking Bad

Justification: Looking bad = Losing Respect

But, if we are unwilling to look bad, we will rarely try something new or outside of our comfort zone

Making
Progress

Creating
Value

The Fear of Being Wrong

Justification: Being wrong = Little value

But, if we are unwilling to be wrong, we will care more about being right than about finding truth and thinking optimally

Making
Progress

Creating
Value

The Fear of Having Problems

Justification: Having problems = Clean up

But, if we are unwilling to have problems, we will

1. Be slow
2. Only do the things that we know we can be successful at
3. Never push the envelope

Making
Progress

Creating
Value

The Fear of Not Being Seen

Justification: Not being seen = Not being of value

But, if we need to be seen, we will create conditions where both customers and employees will get less.

Making
Progress

Creating
Value

The Four (Justifiable) Fears that Limit Value Creation

The fear of looking bad

The fear of being wrong

The fear of having problems

The fear of not being seen

The Four (Justifiable) Fears that Limit Value Creation

The fear of looking bad

The fear of being wrong

The fear of having problems

The fear of not being seen

Making
Progress

Creating
Value

Two Forms of Development

Horizontal: Adding more knowledge, skills, and competencies

- Focus: Doing More

Vertical: Elevating a person's ability to make meaning of their world in more cognitively and emotionally sophisticated ways

- Focus: Being Better

Low Cognitive and Emotional Sophistication

- I can't look bad
- I can't be wrong
- I can't have problems
- I can't be passed up

High Cognitive and Emotional Sophistication

- I need to learn & grow
- I need to find truth
- I need to reach goals
- I need to lift others

1. Awaken to your fears

1. Awaken to your fears

- Fixed Mindset = I can't look bad
- Closed Mindset = I can't be wrong
- Prevention Mindset = I can't have problems
- Inward Mindset = I can't be passed up

2. Get clear on your purpose, and make sure it is a purpose that is focused on creating value (not on making progress)
 - Your “why” > Your fears of:
 - Looking bad
 - Being wrong
 - Having problems
 - Getting passed up

Set an Intention:

- What rope are you going to cut?
- What are you going to do in the next week to cut it?

Cut your fears

So you can be a Value Creator

And not a Progress Maker

<https://ryangottfredson.com/books/>

Thank You

 (801) 458-6321

 ryan@ryangottfredson.com

